Green River Community College - Natural Resource Programs

Green River Community College's main campus, located in Auburn, WA, is a place worth looking into for students considering a Forestry or Natural Resource pathway. The 200 acres of DNR forest land directly adjacent to campus provides the ultimate hands on learning environment for those whose career choices will lead them outdoors. Read More.

WACANE- Washington Association of Collegiate Agriculture and Natural Resource Educators

This summer the Agriculture Center of Excellence hosted a Summer Conference for WACANE, with an increased participation rate of 58%. Community College Ag and Natural Resource instructors were invited to attend at no cost to them for an opportunity to learn about new articulation agreements with four year colleges and how the Ag Center can help in student recruitment and program advertising. Hot topics were discussed addressing main concerns from Ag and Natural Resource instructors from community and technical colleges from across Washington State. Read More.

Ag Center's New Marketing Strategies

This summer, our team at the Agriculture Center of Excellence has given a few new marketing strategies a try; some more successful than others. One of these things was increased visibility of programs, and helping students understand that a 2-year school is a useful route for many. Read More.

ACE Reflections

This year, the Agriculture Center of Excellence has had staff turnover, evolving focuses, and a new broadening horizon. Striving to close the existing skills gap, we've had a tight focus on connecting Ag Education with industry partners; concentrating on the needs of post-secondary education and the current curriculums, and sharing insight to align course outcomes with the skills required in industry.
