- Washington State Department of Agriculture (1 member)
- Washington State Grange (1 member)
- Washington State University (2 members)

The members represent a diverse set of industry stakeholder interests and have a guiding role in the development and implementation of Team Ag Ed activities. Members will provide input on various aspects of planning and related work products. Member opinions, recommendations, and other contributions are viewed as critical to the overall success of the Team Ag Ed's effort.

To facilitate achieving Washington Team Ag Ed's priorities, members will be asked and encouraged to participate as follows:

- Attend and participate in three Washington Team Ag Ed meetings annually.
- Review and provide timely comments on project plans, descriptions, and work products.
- Serve for a three-year term on Washington Team Ag Ed.

Governing Procedures

For virtually any committee process to run smoothly and be successful, it is helpful for those involved to agree at the outset on the purpose of the process and the procedures by which the group will govern its discussions and decision making. Governing procedures for Washington Team Ag Ed are envisioned to address the following topics:

- Attendance expectations
- Decision-making process
- Establish guidelines for communication
- Information sharing
- Media contact
- Participation in constructive discourse
- Procedure amendments
- Work product development

The organization is facilitated by the Agriculture Center of Excellence, an entity of the Washington State Board of Community and Technical Colleges. The Agriculture Center of Excellence (ACE) provides organizational support services to Washington Team Ag Ed. These services include development of meeting agendas, minutes, and meeting facilitation, as well as a direct conduit to all community and technical colleges in Washington State, and a linkage to the agriculture and agriculture-related industries.
